Free Breakfast Sunday Morning for Homeless and Other Poor.

for Homeless and Other Poor.

Easter is to be observed at the Methodist Mission on Sunday next. Mr. Samuel Savers, a Russian, converted twelve months ago, formerly a gambler, and now a steady worser at the Locomotive Works, will serve one hundred eggs at the free breakfast for the homeless. The public is invited to this last breakfast of the season, and it is certain—at one will be repaid to arise in time to see the crowd get their eggs and coffee at 8 o'clock, and then attend the unique religious meeting that always follows this breakfast. For five years this ment has been given each Sunday morning, and men from nearly every nation and elime have heard the gospel, and hundreds have knelt at the aliar of prayer following it.

It is difficult for those who only attend the church service to realize what commonly happens at a mission service. It is interesting to read what happened Tuession. After much spirited singing Mr. Wiley delivered an address and opened the meeting "for what might happen. One man arose, with trembling voice, and said: "I am not meeking; my heart has been touched, I am a backsider. I landed at Newport News two days since on a cattle boat. As dirty and degraded as my appearance is, it does not nearly reveal the misery I know. I want your prayers." This man's face was intelligent and his eyes were bright with youth.

Another man arose and said: "I do not want to be misunderstood. I cannot believe Christ was God or that He arose from the dead: I want to be enlightened if I am wrong: I desire the prayers of the righteous people here." He seemed modest and sincers and even manly.

Another sau: "Saturday I lost my job of only two days work that would have been good for maybe years, and all one count of drink: Sunday morning at the free breakfast here I gave, myself to God; I am again at work; I thope to, stand; pray for me." Another said: "A Christian mother's prayers brings me to this place; add yours to hers."

Wedowee, Ala., a distance of seventy-five miles.

The road will be built by the Atlantic and Birmingham Construction Company, under contract this company having been recently incorporated here with a capital of $3,000,000, while the capital stock of the railroad company is only $100,000, this sum being merely nominal, as the road will be built with the proceeds of bonds.

Back of this enterprise is H. M. Atkinson, the Atlanta financier, and New
